

Greendale Trestle

The Greendale Trestle area is an interesting area because of its natural beauty. But also because it represents the pinch point or point that controls winter flood levels in Cowichan Lake. The following schematic shows the relative elevation of the Greendale site and the weir. This is a difficult concept to grasp as it seems counter-intuitive to some. Craig Sutherland will provide an explanation on site.

